Archaeologists have made an extraordinary find that shows that early humans occupied the Philippines much earlier than thought. According to a report in scientific journal Nature, archaeologists found a complete rhinoceros skeleton with cut marks in a clay bed, along with approximately fifty stone tools at Kalinga on Luzon. The team, partly funded by the National Geographic Society

Cannibalism is one of the oldest and most emotionally charged topics in anthropological literature. Tim White’s analysis of human bones from an Anasazi pueblo in southwestern Colorado, site 5MTUMR-2346, reveals that nearly thirty men, women, and children were butchered and cooked there around A.D. 1100. Their bones were fractured for marrow, and the remains discarded in several rooms of the ...
